In this day & age electricity is an absolute vital MUST for food preservation + contact with major things like centerlink etc . As such a certain amount should be at a base low cost especially for people on centerlink benefits. A sliding scale where very high users with heaps of money pay for the more they use - that helps those that use the least because they MUST. If energy companys don't like it then they can go to hell & return power generation back to the government.
